clocktower.online

although this doesn't strictly match the problem (as it is designed for fully online play) it is still a good example of a layout

Advantages

- Works well
- Has capacity for random character assignment
- Has support for both custom and homebrew scripts

Disadvantages

- Designed for playing entirely online, not in-person
- It is no longer updated (being replaced by botc.app) so doesn't have newer characters
- Doesn't allow for the free movement of tokens

Summary

From the examples I've looked at of similar projects that already exist, my main dislike with them is their lack of flexibility when compared to the physical version of the game.

More specifically, the majority of the sites examined do not have the feature of moveable tokens, they are fixed in a particular shape (commonly a circle). This is disadvantageous as it is better to be able to move the players' tokens to fit the environment that the game is being played in.
